

Whitetail University's 2009 OUTDOOR VIDEO WORKSHOP

If your serious about working in the outdoor video industry, or would like to sharpen your game, shoot better footage and learn the ropes, then discover the power of outdoor video production by attending our workshop. You can actually get paid to hunt or work in the outdoor sports arena. This is the wisest tax-deductable investment you can make this year...invest in you.

Plan to attend April 24, 25, 26, 2009 in PENNSYLVANIA.

During this comprehensive workshop taught by outdoor television/video production pros, you'll learn this and much more

- HOW TO SUCCEED AND MAKE MONEY IN THE VIDEO INDUSTRY
- Field camera operation and on-site filming tips
- Digital and HD camera technology in hands-on sessions
- Learn how to produce a TV show and how to place programming
- Learn how to secure clients, meet their expectations and pay for your show
- Professional wildlife filming secrets and techniques
- How to perform in front of and behind the camera
- How to plan and record an exciting hunt every time
- How to market you – Learn the future of DVD production
- Effective/dynamic shooting for editing – Learn about editing systems
- Uncovering and meeting the needs of your clients
- Do's and don'ts of effective marketing – the foundation of success

Join lead instructor Wade Nolan, award-winning producer/writer/speaker and President of Whitetail University. He is known as America's bowhunting biologist. Wade has produced over 130 hunting videos/DVDs and sold OVER 4 million. His streaming video clips had over 3-million views in 2008. Over 500 outdoor producers have taken his course and many now work on television shows you watch. The results of his exceptional camera and production talents have been seen on National Geographic, ABC, CBS, NBC, TNN, The Outdoor Channel, Sportsman's Channel and the BBC in London.
